- Beyond the beating furge his course he bore,
With longing eyes observing, to survey
Some smooth ascent, or safe sequester'd bay. Pope.
2. Free from hurt.
Put your head into the mouth of a wolf, and when you've brought it out safe and sound, talk of a reward. L'Estrange.
3. Confronting security.
To write the same things to you, to me is not grievous, but to you safe. Phil. iii. 1.
- Ascend; I follow thee, safe guide, the path
Thou lead'st me. Milton.
4. No longer dangerous; repossessed out of the power of doing harm.
Banquo's safe.
—Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch; he lies
With twenty trenched gashes on his head,
The least a death to nature. Shaksp. Macbeth.
- Our great forbidding safe, with all his spies
About him. Milton.
- SAFE. n. f. [from the adjective.] A buttery; a pantry. Ainsw.
- SAFECONDUCT. n. f. [from sauf, French.]
1. Convoy; guard through an enemy's country.
A trumpet was sent to Sir William Waller, to desire a safe-conduct for a gentleman. Clarendon.
2. Pass; warrant to pass.
- SAFEGUARD. n. f. [from safe and guard.]
1. Defence; protection; security.
We serve the living God as near as our wits can reach to the knowledge thereof, even according to his own will; and do therefore trust, that his mercy shall be our safeguard. Hooker.
- If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors. Shaksp.
- The smallest worm will turn, if trod upon;
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood. Shaksp.
- Cesar, where dangers threatened on the one side, and the opinion that there should be in him little safeguard for his friends on the other, chose rather to venture upon extremities, than to be thought a weak protector. Raleigh.
- Great numbers, descended from them, have, by the blessing of God upon their industry, raised themselves so high in the world as to become, in times of difficulty, a protection and a safeguard to that altar, at which their ancestors ministered. Atterbury's Sermons.
- Thy sword, the safeguard of thy brother's throne,
Is now become the bulwark of thy own. Granville.
2. Convoy; guard through any interdicted road, granted by the tect.

- We have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves. Shak. Hen. V.
- SAFELY. adv. [from safe.]
1. In a safe manner; without danger.
Who is there that hath the leisure and means to collect all the proofs, concerning most of the opinions he has, so as safely to conclude that he hath a clear and full view? Locke.
- All keep aloof, and safely shout around;
But none presumes to give a nearer wound. Dryden.
2. Without hurt.
God safely quit her of her burthen, and with gentle travel, to the gladdening of your highness with an heir. Shak. H. VIII.
- SAFENESS. n. f. [from safe.] Exemption from danger.
If a man should forbear his food or his business, till he had certainty of the safety of what he was going about, he must starve and die disputing. South's Sermons.
- SAFETY. n. f. [from safe.]
1. Freedom from danger.
To that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. Shaksp. Macbeth.
- If her acts have been directed well,
While with her friendly clay she deign'd to dwell,
Shall she with safety reach her pristine seat,
Find her rest endless, and her bliss complete? Prior.
2. Exemption from hurt.
3. Preservation from hurt.
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safety; you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think. Shak. Macbeth.
4. Custody; security from escape.
Imprison him;
Deliver him to safety, and return. Shak. King John.

S A G

- It hath a flower consisting of one leaf, which is shaped like a lily, fitfulous underneath, the tube widening into six segments, and resting on the footstalk: the point rises out of the bottom of the flower, and is divided into three-headed or crested capillaments; but the empalement afterwards turns to an oblong triangular fruit, divided into three cells, full of roundish seeds. It hath a tuberose root, and long nervous grassy leaves, with a longitudinal furrow through the middle of each. There are spring-flowering crocuses, and those which flower in Autumn. Their seeds are ripe about the later end of April: the time of planting is in July. About the beginning of September they begin to spire, and sometime after appear the saffron flowers, which are gathered as well before as after they are full-blown; and the most proper time for this is early in the morning: the chives being all picked out of the flowers, the next labour about them is to dry them on the kiln: at first they give it a pretty strong heat. The charges and profits attending the culture of saffron, have been computed in the following manner: the rent of an acre of ground, and the expence of manuring it, is reckoned at twenty-three pounds: the value of twenty-six pounds of saffron, the computed produce of an acre in three years, is, at a mean, supposed to be thirty-nine pounds; and consequently the neat profits of an acre of ground, producing saffron, will in three years amount to sixteen pounds. Miller.
- Grind your bole and chalk, and five or six shives of saffron. Peascham.
- SAFFRON. Barbado. n. f. [from carthamus, Latin.] A plant.
This plant agrees with the thistle in most of its characters; but the seeds of it are always destitute of down. It is very much cultivated in Germany for the dyes use, and is brought from thence into England. As it grows it spreads into many branches, each producing a flower at the top of the shoot, which, when fully blown, is cut or pulled off, and dried, and it is the part the dyes use. Miller.
- SAFFRON. adv. Yellow; having the colour of saffron.
Are these your customers?
Did this companion, with the saffron face,
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut? Shaksp. Henry V.
- Soon as the white and red mixt finger'd dame
Had guilt the mountains with her saffron flame,
I sent my men to Circe's house. Chapman's Odyssey.
- Now when the rosy morn began to rise,
And wad'd her saffron streamer through the skies. Dryden.
- TO SAG. v. n. To hang heavy.
The mind I say by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear. Shaksp.
- TO SAG. v. a. To load; to burthen.
- SAGACIOUS. adj. [from sagax, Latin.]
1. Quick of scent.
So scented the grim feature, and up-turn'd
His nostrils wide into the murky air;
Sagacious of his quarry from so far. Milton's Paradise Lost.
- With might and main they chas'd the murderous fox,
Nor wanted horns to inspire sagacious hounds. Dryden.
2. Quick of thought; acute in making discoveries.
Only sagacious heads light on these observations, and reduce them into general propositions. Locke.
- SAGACIOUSLY. adv. [from sagacious.]
1. With quick scent.

- SAGACIOUSNESS. n. f. [from sagacius.] The quality of being sagacious.
- SAGACITY. n. f. [from sagacis, French; sagacitas, Latin.]
1. Quickness of scent.
2. Acuteness of discovery.
It requires too great a sagacity for vulgar minds to draw the line nicely between virtue and vice. South.
- Sagacity finds out the intermediate ideas, to discover what connection there is in each link of the chain, whereby the extremes are held together. Locke.
- Many were eminent in former ages for their discovery of it; but though the knowledge they have left be worth our study, yet they left a great deal for the industry and sagacity of after-ages. Locke.
- SAGAMORE. n. f.
1. [Among the American Indians.] A king or supreme ruler. Bailly.
2. The juice of some unknown plant used in medicine.
- SAGE. n. f. [from sage, French; savia, Latin.] A plant of which the school of Salernum thought so highly, that they left this verse:
Cur moriatur homo cui salvia crescit in horto.
It hath a labiated flower, consisting of one leaf, whose upper lip is sometimes arched, and sometimes hooked; but the under lip or beard is divided into three parts, bunching out, and not hollowed at the clare: out of the flower-cup rises the pointal, attended, as it were, by four embryos, which afterward become so many seeds, which are roundish, shut up in an husk, which before was the flower-cup: to which may be added, that the stamina do somewhat resemble the os hyoides.
Miller.
